If friendship were a garden, Then flowers 'd be the friends How well our gardens cultivate On each gardener that depends. Some flowers must remain in light, And some will need support But all require love and care Regardless of their sort. We grow our gardens row by row One flower at a time Helping each establish roots Our efforts quite sublime.

Friendship Is A Garden Poem by sam furman - Poem Hunter

They'd been friends for eighty-eight years. Both grandmas were my mentors in their very own ways. One being an example of how I want to live my life, the other showing what happens if I allow my mind to become overgrown and tangled with weeds. I wish I could have done something to help my Grandma Betty tend to her garden.

Your Garden of Thoughts: Keeping Your Mind Weed-Free

To many, Marie Aull was the godmother of the environmental movement in southwestern Ohio. As both a conservationist and gardener, she loved Dayton and its natural beauty, and she devoted her life to preserving it.

Aullwood Garden - Five Rivers MetroParks

As the first in the planned Fiercely and Friends series, the text amounts to more exposition than narrative substance. Jilli's dog Fiercely digs a hole under a fence, and though she frets that he is "digging straight down to China" he ends up in the neighboring yard.
